HOLDS STRONG DEFENSE BEST WAY TO PEACE

Col. Lahm in Memorial Day Address, Cites Need for 'Sufficient Force.'

ican Legion home was unable to participate in the parade.

In his talk, Col. Lahm pointed out that "unfortunately, the human race has not reached a point where conflicts of interest, clashes of ambitions or disputed rights can be resolved at the council table."

Next in line were the McVey post firing squad, the Legion drum corps and Legionnaires, Camp Charles Dink of the Spanish-American war veterans, all of which formed a guard of honor for the car bearing the two lone "boys in blue."

The Sons of Union Veterans preceded a float by the 40 and 8, symbolic of the tomb of the unknown soldier, guarded by four members of the different branches of the service.

The Mansfield Gold Star were followed by a car bearing Col. Lahm, orator of the day, who was escorted by members of Frank Lahm's cadets model airplane club.

The Mansfield high school band preceded Troop No. 16, the troop sponsored by the American Legion, followed by several mobile units of Battery D. These were followed by the Prospect park band and the various auxiliaries of the war veterans organizations.

"Today the best safeguard against the grim word, war, is still as George Washington maintained, an adequate preparedness for defense."

Paying homage to the dead, Col. Lahm said: "I am pleased to participate with you on this day when we pay our respects to those contraries who have answered the last call, to those who offered their lives in order to preserve the liberty for which our forefathers fought, the union which they created, the respect and honor which we feel as justly due our nation, and finally to preserve the form of government which we believe and always have believed is the one that provides the greatest degree of freedom and the largest measure of blessings that life can give."

As the Memorial parade which started at the Legion home, arrived at the cemetery, members of the American Legion opened ranks and the automobile carrying the two G. A. R. vets passed into the stadium, followed by the 29-piece Legion drum corps.

R. W. Stephenson as president of the day presided at the program. Rev. Henry H. Ford, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, gave the invocation.

Following music by the Prospect park band, General John Logan's order No. 68, that led to the establishment of Memorial day, in 1868, was read by Harry Constance.

Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by J. L. Zimmerman and was followed by two selections, "Going Down the Valley" and "God Bless Our Native Land," by a Legion quartet.

Following a recital of "On Flanders Field," memorial poem of the World war, by James Brownson, the roll call of the soldier dead for the year was read by Glenn Gamber, and the auxiliary read by Mrs. Jane Beelman.

The morning had been given over to the decoration of graves of the soldier dead in the city and rural cemeteries by the American Legion assisted by Mansfield Boy Scouts.

At noon the McVey post was hostess at its annual Memorial luncheon attended by three C. A. veterans and nearly 30 Spanish-American war veterans, and 70 American Legion members.

The American Legion auxiliary held its symbolic service at 11 a. m. at the doughboy monument in Central park, as the Legion guard of honor filed a salute.

The parade in the afternoon was headed by the colors and a guard of McVey post No. 16, followed by the Legion staff and massed colors by the Legion, Spanish American war veterans, O'Brien Post No. 326, Shelby and Mansfield Boy Scouts.

ACCIDENTS KILL FOUR FROM AREA

Two Ashlanders Die in Plane Crash; Holiday Toll in Nation at 300.

Mrs. Stella Cummins of Mansfield.

In a similar accident, Lester Baker, 26, of 160 West Fourth street, was seriously injured at 1 a. m. today when he fell three stories from his room. At General hospital, attaches said he received three broken vertebrae, fractures of his left foot and possible internal injuries. His condition is serious.

A Michigan vacation trip for two Ashland youths, one the son of the president of the Faultless Rubber company, ended in death about 4:30 p. m. Sunday when a new plane crashed into Mullet lake, near Cheboygan.

Killed in the crash were Frank

Miller, 25, son of T. W. Miller, sr., head of the rubber company, and his companion, Robert E. Riley, 28. Both were employed by the Faultless Rubber company and had been prominent in college athletics.

The plane crash, which was witnessed by a number of holiday visitors at the Michigan resort, occurred about 200 yards from the shore of the lake. Michigan state police said the ship, a new Stinson cabin model, had come out of a loop close to the water surface and dived into the lake. The bodies were found in about eight feet of water.

Miller, owner of the ship, and Riley, had flown to Michigan from Ashland for the week-end. Miller had been flying for six years and had 900 solo hours to his credit, friends said.

Miller was a graduate of Rollins college, Florida, and Riley graduated from Ashland college in 1932.

Funeral services for Miller will be held at his parents' home at 3 p. m. Wednesday, with Rev. A. H. Smith, pastor of the Ashland Lutheran church officiating. Burial will be in the Ashland cemetery.

Services for Riley will be held at his home at 1 p. m. Wednesday, with Rev. A. A. Hunter, of the Methodist church, in charge. Burial will be in the Savannah cemetery north of Ashland. Two youths were seriously injured Sunday night in the same crash in which Miss McCord, companion, Glenn Blubaugh, 22, also of Lima, is in the Willard hospital with severe head lacerations and body bruises, while Glen F. Martin, 20, of Attica, an occupant of the other car, suffered a skull fracture.

The crash occurred, it was said, when Martin lost control of his car on the slippery paving and the machine skidded into the automobile driven by Blubaugh.

Traffic Takes 174 Lives.

Of the 300 violent deaths in the nation over the holiday week-end, 174 were caused by traffic crashes, 72 by drowning and 11 by fire. Illinois with 25 deaths headed the list of states in fatalities. The Memorial day week-end last year claimed 356 lives in the nation.

The National Traffic Safety council pointed out that there were 2,060 fewer traffic deaths in the nation during the first four months of 1938 than in a similar period last year, representing a 19 per cent reduction.

If the present rate of decrease can be maintained during the year, 7,500 lives will be saved this year, in comparison with last year's figures, Safety council officials said.

CHURCH PLANS $30,000 ANNEX

Shelby Lutheran Congregation to Discuss Addition at Meeting June 12.

SHELBY—Plans for a proposed $30,000 addition to the First Lutheran church were presented Sunday morning to the congregation at the regular morning service by H. C. Brokaw, building committee member.

Tentative plans include a two-story brick building with a semi-basement which would be located east of the present building. The two floors would include two general assembly rooms, ladies' parlor, conference room for general service and 16 class rooms.

The plans call for an assembly hall with a seating capacity of 400 persons and equipped for dramatic and other educational work for the Sunday school in the basement.

A special congregational meeting has been called for June 12 at which time action is expected to be taken on the project.

"YOU SHOULD SEE WHAT I SAW WHERE CAMELS ARE MADE" BY Eddie Cantor

AMERICA'S LAUGH KING, Eddie Cantor, has his serious moments too. His uproarious "Cantor's Camel Caravan" broadcasts (every Monday night—Columbia Network) command respect because of his sincerity in his work. And Eddie's truly sincere in his self-termed job of "Camel Radio Salesman." Says salesman Cantor, "Everything isn't too much to know about a cigarette like Camel." Eddie took a trip to Winston-Salem, home of Camel cigarettes. Here is what he saw—

"HELLO EVERYBODY! Here I am in Camel town. Am I impressed? Everybody looks so happy—so enthusiastic! You'd think each one of the 13,000 Reynolds workers owned the plant. And sav, thousands of them are owners—they've got Camel stock! And they really get fun out of making Camels. Maybe that's a reason people get so much fun out of smoking Camels. Wouldn't you like to work here? Nobody's been laid off by Camels in 12 years. When that old whistle blows, all the officials in this place are right on the job too. And they have only one job—making Camels so good that more people smoke them than any other cigarette. Yes—that's everybody's job at Camels. Imagine a place like this Camel plant. They had social security here years ago. When you're sick, you get a nice healthy check each week. If you die, your family is protected

See why tobacco planters, men who grow and know tobacco, make Camel their cigarette. You'll say, as millions of smokers do, "Camels agree with me." Camel is America's largest-selling cigarette!

Have a Camel! See for yourself why there's more real pleasure—more out-and-out enjoyment—in Camel's matchless blend of finer, more expensive tobaccos—Turkish and Domestic.

Don't miss Cantor's Camel Caravan Monday nights! See radio listing in your local paper for time.

RICHLAND SALES TAX RECEIPTS DOWN ONE-THIRD

$140,000 Collected During First Five Months of Year; 1937 Figure $209,000.

Richland countians paid $68,397 less sales tax during the first five months of this year than in the same period of 1937, a decrease of approximately 33 per cent, figures released by State Treasurer Clarence H. Knisley showed today.

Collections totaling $140,760 for the five-month period this year were reported as against $209,157 last year. Collections for the entire state were $17,615,159 in 1937 and $13,132,878 for the same period this year.

No Increases Reported.

In showing a marked decline, the county was typical of most of the industrial communities in the state which have been hard hit by the economic recession. Not one of the state's 88 counties showed an increase in tax receipts so far this year, although nine of them reported gains in receipts for the week ending May 14 as compared with the same week last year.

Hamilton county, which includes Cincinnati, was the only one of the nine which is in the industrial group.

Richland county's tax receipts for the week ending May 14 were $7,469 as compared with $11,430 for the same week last year.

Generally, the rural counties in the southern part of the state have been less affected by the business and industrial set-back than the industrial centers in the lake region, the treasurer's report indicates.

Homelike Lobby of Homelike Hotel - Fairview

A view of the comfortable and homelike lobby of Hotel Fairview, known far and wide as Mansfield's commercial hostelry, is shown above.

Located at North Diamond and East Third streets, only a half block from the square, the Fairview is the headquarters for scores of salesmen and other commercial men who make weekly and monthly trips to Mansfield.

The four-floor hostelry has 62 rooms, 47 of which are equipped with baths, although every room has soft water. A coffee shop is operated in connection with the hotel while facilities for parking are available for guests.

Since early spring, the Fairview has been under the management of two Mansfield businessmen, Earl Bates and E. W. Schmutzler who purchased the hotel several months ago.

"We aim to continue the same hospitality and courtesy to guests that has been the policy of this hotel in years past," Mr. Bates says.

NAVY DISCARDS 'EAGLE' BOATS AS OUTMODED

Fast Little Sub-Chasers Tried Out Briefly During World War.

(By United Press)
WASHINGTON—The Navy's "Eagle" boats, heralded during the World war as valuable aids in the campaign against German U-boats, will go into the discard May 19.

Two boats of this type, now at the Philadelphia Navy yard, will be sold to the highest bidder. Eight others are now in commission as patrol and training boats.

The "Eagle" boats when built represented a new departure in American naval construction, but the Armistice occurred before their production was on a mass scale. Navy experts commented on the sale announcement with the observation that all types of warcraft must undergo a long period of experimentation in order to be successful.

The "Eagle" boats were developed during the World war, when large numbers of fast vessels were urgently needed to combat the German submarine menace.

Ford Fathered Plan.

To meet this need, Henry Ford proposed the construction of a 200-foot, 500-ton submarine chaser on a mass production basis. Plans for the boat were studied, believed feasible and the navy placed an order for 100 of the craft. Twelve others were ordered later for the Italian navy.

Besides being produced on a quantity basis, the "Eagle" boats were constructed of steel. Previous ships of this type had been built of wood.

Specifications called for a fast ship, capable of a speed of 18 knots and a cruising range of 3,500 miles. They were to be armed with two 4-inch guns, discharge projectors and machine guns. Each ship was equipped to carry 12 depth charges.

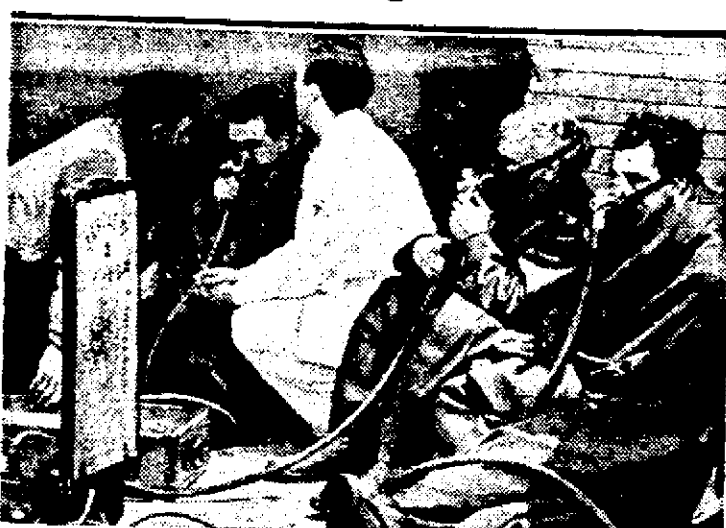

Ford built a special plant on the River Rouge near Detroit to turn out the "seagoing flivvers." Production was soon under way and during one month, 23 of the ships were produced.

A total of 60 "Eagle" boats were built, but only a few saw service before the Armistice was signed. Some of the ships went from New York to Inverness, Scotland, over a 4,500-mile course, while a few went to the Arctic through the ice fields. In several instances, the ships were used as dispatch vessels between northern Russian ports.

Although the "Eagle" boats proved useful at a time when every ship counted, naval experts now feel that the vessels did not fulfill expectations and would not be practicable as a permanent adjunct to the fleet.

The oldest part of North America, the first to be elevated above sea level, is the northeastern section.

TUESDAY, MAY 31, 1938

It's not so much that people CAN'T think—they merely don't like to be bothered.

Now that the supreme court has ruled that football is not an essential part of education, some of the star performers may be required to pass other tests.

Everything's changed. Men used to be hired because there was work to be done. Now work has to be provided because workers must live.

Highway Toll Again Heavy.

WHILE tabulation of fatalities and casualties of the three-day Memorial holiday is not yet complete, enough is at hand to show that this has been another period of widespread tragedy and suffering.

Land, water and air have again taken frightful toll from among those who entered upon the holiday week-end with pleasurable anticipations and without giving thought of injury or death.

With the incomplete list already running into the hundreds, heaviest penalty for carelessness has again been assessed against highway traffic, which claimed more than half of all the victims.

Although considerably more emphasis has been placed on safety education and traffic law enforcement during the past few years, it appears that there has not yet been the general public acceptance of responsibility for careful driving that will be essential to any material reduction in the heavy toll of highway fatalities, which claimed almost 40,000 lives last year.

Another Victim of Kidnapers.

THREE months after the boy was kidnaped, the body of 12-year-old Peter Levine has been found, thus extinguishing the last faint glimmer of hope held by the bereaved parents that their son might still be alive.

But the vicious monsters who abducted and brutally murdered the youthful schoolboy have not yet been captured.

Nor has the kidnaper and murderer of 10-year-old Charles Mattson, snatched from his home in Tacoma, Wash., two and a half years ago, ever been apprehended.

It is horrifying to think that, roaming at large in this country, there are humanly shaped beasts of the kind that will perpetrate such heinous crimes.

Much has been done, in recent years, by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, in co-operation with state and municipal law enforcement authorities, to solve kidnaping cases and capture the offenders, thus tending to reduce the number of such crimes, a wave of which came in the wake of the breakdown of previously profitable bootlegging racket.

In the swing of the pendulum from brutality in punishment, there has been inclination in this country to go to the other extreme of pampering known criminals; being over-zealous of the "rights" of law violators, and taking no steps to restrict the free movement of persons of obvious criminal potentialities.

Nor have there been any serious steps toward preventing the continued propagation of the subnormal type of children from which vicious or moronic criminals are a quite natural development.

Arguments are put forward from time to time against the death penalty for capital offenders. Painless execution of a murderer, or a person who has participated in a kidnaping, might better be regarded as extermination, rather than punishment. By his act he has demonstrated that he is not human, except in shape, and has forfeited his right to live.

All-American Peace Desirable.

ALL good Americans, from the Arctic ocean to Tierra del Fuego, should join the governmental heads of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru, Uruguay and the United States, in their appeal to Bolivia and Paraguay to end the Gran Chaco war. Hostilities ended three years ago, but official peace has not been concluded.

That war probably was, in proportion to the population and resources of the countries engaged, the most costly conflict ever fought in this New World. Two small, poor nations wasted their liquid resources, mortgaged their future for generations and lost 100,000 lives.

They fought over a disputed boundary in the wilderness, as many nations have done in many ages. The border was not clearly defined, so they marked it with their bones. It is a costly procedure.

What happens in the lower reaches and vague interiors of South America is of concern to North Americans. We free countries of this hemisphere are, in an unusual way "members of one another." It is of special importance, in the present unsettled state of the world, that we should all be at peace with each other.

Solomon's Seaport Found.

ARCHEOLOGISTS, who dig up everything sooner or later, have found King Solomon's seaport. Many will be surprised to learn that the famous sovereign ever had a seaport. There seems to be no direct reference to it in the Bible, and Solomon has been thought of as a landsman, particularly because of his confession that "the way of a ship in the sea" was too much for him. He didn't seem to know what made it tick. And probably he avoided sea travel because it made him sick. It may have been the wave motion that was too much for him. Yet it is recorded that he built ships with the help of Hiram, king of Tyre.

It was logical to think that he must have had a seaport to handle the commerce that would come from Africa and Arabia and farther regions, by water. And the evidence of that port is found where it might have been expected, in the nearest sheltered water, at the end of the Gulf of Agabah, which is the eastern arm of the northern end of the Red sea. There was no good harbor near Jerusalem on the Mediterranean. There must have been a caravan route from Agabah to Jerusalem.

A small city flourished there for two centuries. After nearly 3,000 years it is naturally an obscure mass of ruins, with few surface signs of its ancient life. But the archeologists dig up bricks, old records, spear-heads, nails and fish hooks.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — Just as news of possible revolution in Mexico comes dribbling into the United States, the attention of the state department and the senate foreign relations committee is called to a section of the neutrality act that has a capacity to gum up operation of the "good neighbor" policy.

In 1928 President Coolidge went to Havana with all the pomp and fanfare that could be attached to Mr. Coolidge (and he wouldn't allow much). There, a solemn covenant was drawn up among the American republics by which all agreed that if a revolution should break out in any one, the others would refuse to ship arms to the rebels. Arms would be shipped only to the government forces. Mexico signed it. So did the United States and most others.

The idea was to preserve peace and discourage any one nation from precipitating or aiding a revolution in any of the others.

There Is the Rub.

BUT last spring, in its hasty effort to legislate an embargo against arms shipments to Spain, congress enacted a neutrality measure providing that in event of a serious civil war in some foreign country, the United States would refuse to ship arms there. Much discretion is allowed the president to determine whether the civil war is dangerous to the peace and security of the United States. He is obligated to impose the embargo only if the shipment of arms threatens to involve the United States in the fray or to endanger its peace and security.

But if the civil war gets bad, he has to stop shipments of arms to both sides, rebels or government. And that, so authorities on foreign affairs here say, appears to be in conflict with the Havana treaty which pledged the nations to help each other suppress civil wars.

Of course a way out was provided each nation. If any nation decides the rebel outbreak is justified it may "recognize" the rebel group as a legitimate belligerent and so ship arms or not, as it chooses.

Now if a civil war should break out in Mexico the United States would be confronted at once with a double question:

Should it abide by the treaty and help out the Cardenas government? Or should it abide by the neutrality act and refuse aid to either side?

Picking 'Wrong Horse.'

A HALF dozen years after the Havana treaty was drawn up, Brazil had a revolution. In keeping with its agreement, the U. S. government, with Henry Stimson as secretary of state, permitted arms to move to the government forces. By the time they reached there, the rebels had won. They took over the shipment of arms intended for the other side.

Stimson was dubbed "Wrong Horse" Henry for presumably backing the wrong side. There are good sources here who say he knew the rebels would win but was determined to respect the treaty regardless.

The rebels didn't kick too much because they suspected the time would come when they would want the treaty lived up to in the same way. Those rebels are now the government.

The Constitution provides that a treaty shall become the "supreme law of the land" but the same status is enjoyed by an act of congress such as the neutrality act.

One high source gave the opinion that in event of a civil war in Mexico the president would be morally obligated under the treaty to permit arms to go to Cardenas (in spite of oil land seizures), even though it meant ignoring the neutrality act.

THE ONE GOOD KEY

Program of Left-Wingers Outlined

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Planned economy of business, with close government supervision of production and competition on much the same pattern as Secretary Henry A. Wallace is now regulating agriculture, will be pressed strongly by left wingers, as the next step toward "recovery," President Roosevelt is disposed to go along with them, though questioning the political expediency of such a move on the eve of the congressional elections.

Right wing advisers hope that victory for the wage-hour bill may dissuade him, but more economic planning is the prospect at the tag end of a session in which the president was turned down on government reorganization and his favorite tax theories, with an indication of more independence in congress and more turning-to-the-right by the government in spite of Roosevelt's personal views.

It is the prospect because of utter failure of pump-priming and credit inflation to give business and employment the lift that the left wingers predicted. It is the prospect also because, despite the failure of the Roosevelt recovery measure and despite the desire for independence on Capitol Hill, various tests show that Roosevelt still stands strong with the voters—that he has the power to defeat, if not the power to elect.

CONSERVATIVE independents on Capitol Hill are distinctly worried by numerous developments, hence are not only afraid themselves but are gaining few recruits. Florida nominated a New Dealer and a Townsend plan advocate over an independent conservative. Florida in a runoff election proceeds to nominate a Townsendite and a New Dealer for the seat in the house which an independent conservative now occupies. Oregon Democrats beat a sitting governor for re-nomination largely because he had insisted on preserving order in labor disputes, nominating a New Dealer endorsed by Harold L. Ickes.

Washington faces the unprecedented situation of a bad depression and increasing unemployment actually helping the administration in power, instead of crushing it as has invariably been the case in this country's political history. Congress construes the various votes and polls as a mandate to the president to proceed with economic experimentation. The only question is whether the president will "press his luck" and go forward with plans he has long contemplated and approved.

These include plans to avoid increasing capacity to the point where profits are turned into "additions to plants which are now standing stark and idle" as he said in his 1932 acceptance speech. Also plans to prevent unfair competition, monopolistic methods in business, collusion to produce identical bids on contracts, movements of plant to reach cheaper labor for exploitation. In short, plans to attain the ideal of planned economy with no depression, no booms, no underprivileged, no speculative profits of any kinds, and very small profits for all business units.

SENATOR Robert J. Bulkley's long-cherished plan for setting up a national economic council, which he sought to revive again this week, doesn't fit into this picture. Intended to promote intelligent co-operation between business and government, it might be productive of competent advice but doesn't lay any obligation on the administration to accept it.

A good example of the utility of that kind of thing is Secretary Daniel C. Roper's business advisory council, which is nominally comprised of rather important men but whose advice, to the extent that it may filter through Roper, is ignored by the administration.

In economic fact-finding, the field is already well occupied by Brookings Institution and several other organizations not so susceptible to political tincture as a government-sponsored group. Political considerations encountered in application of administration planning are accommodated by the National Emergency council. (Copyright, 1938)

Timely Editorial

Forget Manners At Wheel.

It is remarkable how many otherwise well mannered people seem to forget consideration of others the moment they take hold of the steering wheel of a motor car. A large proportion of them seem to have no compunction against startling and irritating those within hearing distance by the needless tooting of raucous horns. Adults often are as ill-mannered as youthful drivers in this respect.

Horn blowing is necessary only about once in 1,000 instances, declares Maj. Henry H. Curran, deputy mayor of New York, "and that once is predicated on the avoidance of danger. The worst offenders among those who sound horns without justification are the fellows who do not understand the ABC in the code of good manners." Drivers of private cars are much worse offenders than truck drivers and taxi pilots, he adds.

New York City's campaign against tooters resulted in 10,000 convictions last year, and 4,270 summonses already have been issued this year. Those who yearn for self-expression by means of claxon calls must pay a $2 fine for disregard of an ordinance designed to rid the city of raucous disturbances by day and night.—Dallas News.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

HOW LONG SHOULD YOUR WORKING DAY BE? "That's easy!" cry Notion Counter Nellie and Ditch Digger Dan, with a disgusted glare at their needles and pins, picks and shovels. "Three hours a day—or even two—is more than enough for us. The Good Book said a mouthful when it declared that work was a curse, and the less we have of that curse, the more we'll like it."

But next you turn to ambitious Larry the Law Clerk and pretty Carrie, the Commercial Advertising artist. Larry and Carrie dote on their jobs—would gladly work fourteen hours per to writing briefs and smearing paint. Do they want THEIR hours cut—even if it DOES give some unemployed worker a chance?

There you have two sides of the red-hot question presented by clever Georgina Rappe, 25-year-old San Franciscan.

"Dear Miss Robinson—" "Three hours of work a day is sufficient for anyone. There would be a definite improvement in our nation's economic picture if each person's working hours were curtailed to a minimum and the work spread.

"Families could spend more time together. Parents—particularly working mothers—could become better companions with themselves and their children. There'd be more leisure, better meals. Health and happiness would result.

"I am convinced that 'spreading the work,' rather than taxing working people to support the unemployed, is the only sensible and logical answer. Under the present conditions, few people can feel free. If you're not working, you're depending upon relief. If you are working, you're taxed almost to bankruptcy to support relief.

"BY ALL MEANS, REDUCE WORKING HOURS AND TAXES AND ALSO UNEMPLOYMENT!"

Mrs. Georgina Rappe—age 25, San Francisco, Calif. ($10 prize winner.)

Good reasoning, up to a certain point, but let's see how the others feel about the question. Would YOU and YOU and YOU—be willing to halve your jobs?

AND now another Young American launches a bomb. Broadcasting his Mothers' day message, highly popular radio commentator John B. Hughes took his courage in his hands and made one of the most startling broadcasts ever hurled upon the air. While encouraging every form of love and gratitude toward our mothers—while admitting that he, himself, stood in line with his Mother's day present to the World's Dearest—he cried out against those who need commercial advertising to remind them of their love for their mothers.

"LET'S NOT HAVE JUST ONE DAY WITH ITS CARD AND TRIVIAL PRESENT," cried this reckless crusader. "BUT MAKE EVERY DAY A MOTHER'S DAY. FILLED WITH CONSTANT REMINDERS OF DEVOTION AND GRATITUDE."

And now comes a Young Mother, endorsing these sentiments with a full heart. "Dear World—

"Yesterday was Mothers' day and it set me to thinking. I'm a young mother with two babies. I'd hate to think that when my children grow up they'd have to have a special day set aside to remember me. Believe me, I'm not condemning the Mothers' day practice nor the part that Big Business plays in it—but I do think one should send telegrams, flowers and other gifts without having to be reminded.

"I remember when I was a child—and even to this day—we were taught (and it was engraved in our hearts) that every day was Mother's day. I remember when I first started to work, there wasn't a pay day I didn't come home with some little gift for Mother.

"Mothers' day may be a grand gesture, but most mothers, I'm sure, wish it lived all year 'round in their children's hearts, rather than on one day in May."

Mrs. C. Del Dotto—age 23, San Francisco, Calif. ($10 prize winner)

Brave words, my dear—and words which, I'm sure, the "Big Business Promoters" of Mother's day will warmly applaud.

YOUNG America's still seeing red-white-n-blue because of friend Harrison's unfortunate remark that a Dictator might be good for what ails America. Zowie—what a barrage that youngster started! This time it's Nellie Richards of Frostburg, Md., who's telling him where to head in.

"Dear Elsie—" "I can't imagine a REAL

A Son Like His Father.

My son! Amazement claims me that You are my own, that you I cradled in these arms, that from That little one you grew.

My son, so tall and fine, so like Your father when he came That summer day, so long ago, A timid bride to claim.

Sometimes I think that you are he:

You turn your head, your hand Hold out just as he did, the same Fine grace at your command.

So hard it is, he cannot see You now, as now you are, And yet perhaps he knows, looks down,

From some bright haven star.

TABLE REVEALS MONTHLY COST FOR FHA HOMES

Federal Department Shows
Method of Approximating
All Inclusive Charge.

A question of paramount importance to most prospective home owners who wish to finance their property under the Federal Housing Administration's insured mortgage system is: How much will I have to pay each month?

They ask this question rightly, because if the home they desire would call for payments beyond a buyer's ability to meet without unduly straining his income the FHA would not approve application for a loan.

An accurate approximation of the all-inclusive monthly installment required to pay off an insured mortgage may be worked out from the accompanying table which shows average monthly payments to principal, interest, and average FHA insurance premium based on 5 per cent interest and one-fourth of 1 per cent premium on reducing balances. To these figures there should be added approximate hazard insurance premium and taxes. These latter figures are usually available from local authorities.

Monthly payments to principal, interest and average FHA insurance premium.

(Based on 5 per cent interest, one-fourth of 1 per cent premiums on reducing balances)

Charming California Cottage

This inviting looking small California house, which cost less than $3,000, is remarkably roomy.

The first floor includes a large living room with a broad bay, kitchen, lavatory with shower bath, and a two-car garage. Upstairs are four bedrooms, a bath and sun deck over the garage. All the principal rooms have cross ventilation.

The architectural detail of the doors and windows has been attractively handled by Architect Donald Beach Kirby. The roof is dark, the walls of wood siding were treated to weather into a soft gray, window sashes are ivory and shutters a bottle green.

The plan, specially designed for a small lot, 30x85 feet, was chosen by The American Home, 444 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

*Based on a maximum mortgage of $5,400 on an owner-occupied dwelling, inspected by the Federal Housing Administration during construction.

ATTIC STAIRS
The width of attic stairs and doorway largely determine how useful it will be. As a storage room for trunks and large furniture, it is necessary to have the stairs of a practical width.

FILL UP PORES

On new wood, a priming coat must first be used to fill the pores. If this is not done, the many pores will absorb the oil from the paint and leave the upper coat with rapidly dulling spots. The priming coat must have plenty of raw linseed oil to fill these pores. A second coat to establish a smooth non-absorbent ground for the last coat is advisable.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"By the way," Griff continued. "What did you do to the old boy the other night? He's been going around like he'd lost his last friend. I tried to jolly him today when he was tinkering around a machine next to me. And all I could get was a dirty look."

"I'm sure I don't know."

"I'll bet that boy's got something tucked away in a rusty sock for a rainy day. It might pay you to be a little smart."

"Children!" Mrs. Layne's placid voice. "Please don't squabble."

"I was just thinking," Muriel mused, "it's quite too bad, Larry, that . . . that things happened as they did. Mr. Odell seemed such a pleasant man. And now, I don't suppose he will call again."

"Probably not," Larry agreed shortly.

"Muriel's got the right idea," Griff beamed. "There's some prey worth stalking, kid. That guy's a peach. You know, the fellows out in the plant didn't take to him much at first. They thought he didn't know anything about the game and, being the old man's nephew, he'd throw a big front. Funny thing about it all, he was dumb about the mill stuff and didn't make any bones about it. He'll ask questions of anybody at all and treat you like a pal. You can tell quick enough that you don't want to try to pull anything on him, too. If he sticks around that dump, he'll know more about it than the old man. But he's tops in the office, isn't he?"

"I think everybody liked him," Larry's eyes were on her plate.

"He might come back," Muriel pursued pensively. "There's no reason why he shouldn't, if he likes. Now, since you're not in the office any more, no one could make unpleasant remarks. Could they?"

"All right, you two!" Larry exclaimed wearily. "If it will ease your minds any, Mr. Odell is coming here this evening. At eight o'clock. He said he wanted to see me about something and he's going to see me on the front porch. And if you don't stay out there and help entertain him, I'll never forgive you."

"Sorry," Griff teased regretfully. "I got a date with my own girl friend tonight. But I'll be crazy to hear what happens."

"Larry turned to her mother. "Please, Mums. I mean it. Muriel, too."

"Why . . . why, if you really want me . . ." Mrs. Layne agreed hesitatingly. "For a little while, anyway. But he most likely wants to see you on business."

"Then you must change your dress, mother, and so must I," Muriel counseled unexpectedly. "We'd better get these dishes out of the way."

"Can you tie that?" Griff wanted to know. Of no one in particular.

On the stroke of eight, Clay's roadster stopped in front of the house. Larry was in her favorite corner of the swing, slightly perturbed at the moment. Her family had not come to reinforce her as promised and her company had arrived too suddenly to give her a chance to summon help.

"Good evening!" Clay called, as he ascended the steps. "I was very much in hopes you could grant my request. How are you?"

"Fine," Larry rose and extended a slim, cool hand. "Mama and Muriel will be out in a moment."

"Good!" was the answer. Clay seemed not at all downcast, as he helped himself to a seat in the swing likewise. He proffered a white package. "I hope you have a sweet tooth."

Larry laughed. "I love candy . . . thank you ever so much."

"You're most welcome. Hope you don't mind if I smoke out here?" He proceeded to light a cigarette at Larry's murmured assent. She thought she detected that familiar smile in his eyes with the momentary flare of the match.

"And how is the lady of leisure making out?"

"First rate. Just for fun this afternoon, I went downtown and made a few inquiries . . . just to see what the general situation was."

"Any luck?"

"Not to speak of. Business rather quiet."

"It is. I was glad when you told me that another job wasn't a pressing matter with you. I don't believe that Norwood offers much, anyway . . . not many positions, you'd want to hold permanently,

"I mean."

"How are you making out?" Larry countered quickly.

"Why, I haven't made any serious effort . . . one letter to my old boss. The whole thing puts me in an awkward predicament. I'm satisfied that my uncle is going to hold me here to the last day. He's very much the precisian, you know. I don't want to seem to be fiddling around doing nothing and, at the same time, there's no incentive to do much."

"I suppose not."

From the way Clay said that, he apparently still intended to leave when his time was up. He was making a dreadful and foolish mistake, Larry thought inwardly. But there was nothing she could do about it, now. She asked, hoping vaguely that something of interest to her might result.

"Then there's no exciting news from the Norwood Mills, Incorporated?"

"Not a thing. I've come shamefully near loafing all day." Perhaps Ollie had really spent some time in the private office, Larry thought with unexplainable resentment.

"Come to think of it, I did have an unusual experience," Larry leaned forward from her corner instinctively. "Yes, sir, I okayed a raise for a fellow. That's something in this day of sail-trimming. Queerer than that, it was my uncle's own suggestion. A young machinist in the mill . . . did a clever repair job. Name is . . . Sherman? No. Grant. Wilbur Grant. Uncle Romulus says he has a future, that he's going to go far."

Larry relaxed with a little gasp. Wilbur! A horrid fear flashed into her mind. Ollie! Had she mentioned Wilbur to Mr. Odell? Oh, she couldn't have! Wouldn't dare.

"That's nice," she managed. But her voice was oddly flat.

"I think so, too," Clay agreed pleasantly. "I always like to see a chap get ahead by his own efforts. What little I've done has all been on my own. Not meaning to brag . . . under the present circumstances."

Before Larry could think of any rejoinder, there came a sound of footsteps on the front stairs. Mrs. Layne and Muriel were making their delayed entry. Clay must have heard. His voice was low, but urgent.

"Larry! Would you like to go out in the canoe after a while? There's going to be a moon and I want to talk to you . . ."

A swift vision of still water, a canoe floating, Clay's face in the moonlight. Oh . . . too dangerous. "I'm afraid not . . . tonight."

Larry said it in a strained little voice.

Larry admitted a grudging admiration for the suave greetings which Clay Odell extended to her mother and older sister when they appeared on the front porch. He chatted so easily and informally with them all. Muriel was silent after a few perfunctory remarks, but that was to be expected. Mrs. Layne was not so voluble as usual and Larry suspected that she was a little embarrassed at the particular attention she was receiving from the guest. With an idea of making things a bit less formal, Larry told Clay laughingly.

"I'm going to tell you a good joke on Mama, Mr. Odell. The first time she heard your name she thought it sounded like Yodel, and that's what she's been calling you most of the time."

"Now, Larry, I certainly have done no such thing. . . ." Mrs. Layne was defending herself in confusion, when Clay's hearty laugh interrupted her.

"I like that!" he declared. "I can't sing at all, Mrs. Layne, but I'll tell you one of my secret ambitions. And that's to stand on the top of the Alps, in shorts and with a feather in my hat, and blow one of those horns."

BRITISH PRIDE IN HIGH TAXES LONG EVIDENT

Most Popular of Exchequer Heads Have Raised Assessments on Incomes.

(By United Press)
LONDON—The new income tax of 27½ per cent, as compared with the previous 25 per cent, already has achieved a definite popularity for Sir John Simon, thanks to John Bull's secret pride in a good stiff income levy.

For history shows that, notwithstanding protests which may be made at the time, all British chancellors of the exchequer who have increased income taxes have achieved both current popularity and a solid place in the country's fiscal history, while those—like David Lloyd George and Reginald McKenna in the early days of the war—who have seemed over-tender of the private purse subsequently have been scolded for it.

Table Since 1914.
Income tax always is stated in so many shillings and pence in the pound of taxable income left after various allowances, but its burden is more visible to foreigners when stated in percentages of the taxable income. The following table shows income tax rates since the World war:

Year Ending March 31	Percent of Taxable Income
1914	5.8
1915	8.3
1916	15.0
1917	25.0
1918	25.0
1919	30.0
1920	30.0
1921	30.0
1922	30.0
1923	25.0
1924	22.5
1925	22.5
1926	20.0
1927	20.0
1928	20.0
1929	20.0
1930	20.0
1931	22.5
1932	25.0
1933	25.0
1934	25.0
1935	22.5
1936	22.7
1937	25.0
1938	27.5

The table shows that British politicians waited until the end of the World war before they raised the income tax to 30 per cent—the highest in history—although every economist of note begged them to assess a high tax immediately and thus prevent inflation in prices. But the table also shows that when the government finally did assess it, the high tax held inexorably all through the post-war slump of 1920-21. There was considerable comment at the time that this procedure was pretty rough on the men who had returned from the trenches and found that they were expected to "pay for the war" as well as fight it.

The same generation, its ranks thinner and its hair considerably grayer, is now invited to help pay for armament for another possible war.

Thrown upon a chart the post-war fluctuations of the income tax rate give a fairly accurate picture of the ups and downs of British economy since 1914.

Toronto Baby of 27 Months Puffs On Briar Pipe

TORONTO — (UPI) — Alphonse Robert "Ali" Aida, aged 27 months, puffed meditatively on his briar pipe while his mother told an interviewer he had been smoking for nearly a year and his ambition was to be an actor.

She said Ali reached over and took his father's pipe and puffed on it about one year ago. We let him do it, thinking if he became ill he would not show any further interest," she said, "but instead of becoming ill he apparently enjoyed it and took every opportunity to repeat the act.

"Finally we took him to a specialist in New York to ask how best to break him of the habit. The doctor said if he smoked in moderation it would not do him as much harm as the psychological effect of forbidding him might do. Since then we have bought him his own pipe, which he fills with tobacco and lights himself.

Children Cause Suffering

By VIRGINIA LEE
Take it by and large, it is a rare privilege to be a parent. And the love, care, money, and even worry, expended on young persons from the cradle to the parents' grave, is well expended.
But there are times when I feel very sorry for parents, and the time I feel sorriest for them is when girl or boy is in love with one whom the parents feel is utterly unsuitable as a mate.
There is so little parents can do under the circumstances. If they oppose the affair, it only estranges the child from them and makes him or her more determined to have their own way. Love is so very blind under these circumstances, and nothing seems to open eyes that it has closed.
I am thinking of the girl who was a close comrade of her dad and mother—especially her dad—until such time as she fell in love. The boy was all right, but he was in college and not in a position to wed. The girl spent one summer at home, separated from the boy, and she was in a pathetic frame of mind. She was not well physically, was irritable and very unhappy. Then she quarreled with her father. He never did know what it was all about, he told me pathetically, left home and went to her grandmother. Later the boy joined her and they were married. The fact that they were happy together and that later she died when her second child was only 10 days old, has nothing to do with the fact that through her inability to control her emotions her husband never was able to finish his schooling, and that it handicapped him in her life and his special line of work. And her father and mother—again, especially the former—suffered agonies in the estrangement, and never fully understood how it was seemed all of a sudden to lose his cherished daughter. These were the tragedies.
I do think modern young people are trying (and succeeding somewhat) in using their heads as well as their hearts when they choose their life partners. If they only would realize that a charming appearance may cover a multitude of sins! That if a person has been married and divorced it should be taken as a warning signal, not necessarily to break off the affair, but at least to do some investigating. Statistics prove that children of divorced parents are less likely to live out their lives with their mates, and there may be something very wrong with the person whose mate has felt the need for divorce. At the very best the blame seldom is all with one party.
Then a discrepancy in age may mean an utter difference of ideas and interests; and two people who have very different ideals and tastes are seldom happy together. What can I say to make the youth in love stop, look and listen before they rush on to matrimony?

Revolves Around Swing Band
"Cocoanut Grove," current feature at the Madison theater with Fred MacMurray and Harriett Hilliard in the leading roles, tells the story of a happy-go-lucky swing band leader and his hungry crew playing their way to fame and fortune at Hollywood's famous night spot, the Cocoanut Grove. The film follows their adventures in a trek across country from Chicago to Los Angeles. On the way the band annexes a kid, Billy Lee, Miss Hilliard and a Billy-billy com, Rufe Davis. Mishaps and unusual situations revolving around the Ritz brothers, are strung along the way. The picture finishes a five-day run Wednesday night.

"Manhattan Melodrama"
Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and William Powell head the cast of "Manhattan Melodrama," opening at the Ritz theater Wednesday. The film depicts the adventures of a powerful gambler, his sweetheart and a promising district attorney. The gambler and attorney were boyhood friends, but when the former murders one of the latter's bitter enemies he is convicted and sentenced to the chair. He also loses his girl to the attorney. The second feature on the double feature program will be "The Big Broadcast of 1938," with W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Dorothy Lamour and Ben Blue, "Happy Landings," and "You're Only Young Once," plays through today.

"Hold That Kiss."
Trouble for two entwines "Hold That Kiss," new comedy-romance opening at the Ohio theater Wednesday with Maureen O'Sullivan, Dennis O'Keefe, and Mickey Rooney. DOUBLE AFTER A BID

WHEN AN experienced player has opened the auction with a suit bid and then doubled on his next turn, without having heard anything from his partner except a pass, he is making an informative double asking for a takeout. That is, unless the doubled bid is two or more no trump or at least three of a suit. In such circumstances, the double of a suit bid of three may usually be treated as either for information or for penalties, putting it up to the partner to use his judgment.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, June 1.

This should be a lively and fairly progressive day, despite many perplexities, peculiar situations and probable delays and obstructions, according to the planetary positions. It may take subtlety, strategy or diplomacy to sidestep some tenacious obstacles in which friends may be involved. Vexations, trials and surprises loom. Travel may be necessary, and the clever manipulation of writings may serve to swerve dubious situations to the desired ends.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a fairly active and interesting year, although there may be frustrations, delays and surprising developments to cope with. An element of intrigue, mystery or subtlety may call for shrewdness or diplomacy. Journeys or removal may be involved. But with proper management, matters may thrive, with writings helping to solve perplexities.

A child born on this day may be clever, energetic and hard working, but given to easy discouragement or depression.

repressible young brother who threatens constantly to expose her secret, and "Buck," a St. Bernard dog actor, whom neither hero or heroine can afford to keep, contribute to the rocks cast in the smooth path of love until the lovers find out the truth about each other and start life on a new basis. "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," with Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper is the feature through today.

Joneses in Paris.

The Jones family, one of those movie groups whose family affairs make popular entertainment, is seeing the sights of Paris in their latest episode which is offered at the Majestic for three days, starting today. Pa and Ma Jones finally take that trip they'd dreamed about for years, and entirely by accident. Ma does the rumba in Paris, sister does the Latin quarter, and Pa finds that the Rue de la Paix should have been spelled "Pay" as it is pronounced. "A Trip to Paris" has the original cast of the Jones family series. Jed Proust, Shirley Byington, Shirley Deane and Russell Gleason. The second feature is a picture of modern China, terrorized by a war lord whose wife is an American woman. "Wife of General Ling," is a Gaumont-British picture with an all-English cast.

Exercise To Keep Trim Figure

By JULIET SHELBY
(Central Press Writer on Beauty)

BEWARE THE vanishing waistline and the broad beam. They will make you look old before your time as nothing else can. Your arms may be lovely, your legs well proportioned, and you may not really weigh much more than you should to have a fine figure. But if those insidious pounds have settled on your diaphragm and buttocks you will look and feel too fat for comfort.

The thing to do is to get rid of that extra fat the minute it appears. If you let yourself go for ages, then the reconstruction period will be longer, harder and much more drastic. So concentrate on getting rid of that fatty tissue while it is still in the flabby stage. When it gets to be hard, firm fat, it will be a real job to trim yourself down.

Here is an excellent exercise for the diaphragm. And it won't leave you tuckered out, either. It's called the camel exercise, because you hump your back. Hold your head up and hump your back. Then sway your body forward with your chest low and leading. Next flatten your back with your chest following. Repeat this until it becomes all one continuous wave-like movement. It is also swell for getting the kinks out of your back and between the shoulder blades.

Go Across Room and Back.

The exercise for the buttocks is just as beneficial as a good going over by a Swedish masseuse. Sit on the floor with your legs stretched out before you. Then try to progress across the room. "Walk" with your buttocks. Swing your body back and forth and from side to side. Keep upright while doing this by using your hands and arms as supports. This is rather difficult at first and won't feel too good, but it certainly hits the right spot.

Start out by going across the room and back. Then as you get a little more hardened to the exercise you can do it five times both ways.

If you feel that to really get in shape you should also do something about your stomach as well as your diaphragm and buttocks, then try a lying-down stomach flattener. Lie on your back, having first removed any tight clothes, girdle or corset. Put a big book, a large telephone directory or encyclopedia will do, on your tummy. If you want to be really technical you can get a bag of sand that weighs about five pounds. Lift the weight up and down with your stomach muscles. Push firmly and feel the weight rising and falling from your exertions. Start out by doing this about fifty times. You'll find that this is also very good for sluggish intestines. So you'll end by feeling as young as you look after following these exercises.

Marriage Meddlers

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

By ADELE GARRISON

Katherine's face was dark with anxiety when I had finished telling her of the heritage which Dicky's dead sister, Elizabeth Harrison, had left to her son Henry.
"Bad business," she commented. "Queer that there isn't a trace of cruelty in any of the other three. Roderick is inclined to be selfish, and he isn't always truthful, but he's nearly as tender-hearted as Junior. Probably the answer lies in the father. He was killed with their mother in a motor accident, wasn't he?"
"Yes," I replied. "Elizabeth was killed instantly, but her husband was conscious long enough to give the custody of the children over to Dicky and Harriet."
"And what a blessing that was!" she ejaculated. "I remember that mess when Harrison's relatives tried to get control of the children for the insurance and property involved, and the Braithwaites spirited them over to Europe until the legal questions involved were settled. He must have known his kin, that man, which proves him to have been shrewd. But what were his other traits?"
"Splendid. All of them," I returned. "He was kind, unselfish, generous, honorable, patient and indulgent. The children, except Roderick, who was too young to know what he had lost, were wild with grief over his loss. But—here is the pitiful part of it all—I am sure they pretended grief for their mother because they thought they ought to give that respect to her memory. But secretly, I believe the three elder children were relieved that she had gone out of their lives."
"What else could they have felt?" Katherine asked rhetorically, adding briskly: "But the fatherly character supplies all the answers, the reasons for the freedom of the other three children from the taint, and also the fact that Hank has so many good qualities. It will make his problem easier to solve. But Madge, I do not think he ought to go back to school until Dicky has taken him to a specialist in neurotic conditions, and found out just what ought to be done with him. I suppose he's terribly busy, but he ought to be able to get away long enough to attend to this."
"I don't know," I said. "He's awfully busy right now."
Faith gurgled and banged her spoon. Katherine put a simple dessert in front of her.
"You think, then, that it is improbable he can take time to go to the city with Hank?"
"I really don't know," I answered. "He said that he would telephone today if he couldn't come. He hasn't phoned, so he may be on his way. If he does come, I will try my best to have him go with Hank. But I want you to tell me something more about Hank. Do you think he has been in the habit of striking Junior?"

Katherine did not answer me for a second.
"I never saw him strike either Roderick or Junior," she said, "and I am sure of one thing—he never struck either of them when Bill could see the blow."
"But I have seen Roderick and Junior in tears or anger more than once, when I have strongly suspected that Hank had been subjecting them to what he probably would call necessary discipline."
"Hank is cunning," she went on, "and, of course, he gambled heavily upon the horror of both kids for what they call 'snitching.' I don't believe you could get them to tell tales if you tied them to a stake and set a fire under them."
"Exactly," I answered. "But did anything strike you about the manner in which Hank slapped Junior?"
"Did anything strike me?" she retorted, her lips twisting into a rueful grin. "That slap was delivered too efficient. It was alleviated by an expert who had perfected it through practice."
"That was what I thought," I replied, "but I didn't want to voice my opinion unless you thought the same thing. Oh! but I'd like to get my hands on Hank for about five minutes." I added with irrelevant fierceness, and Katherine laughed.
"Don't get me wrong," she said briskly. "I share your anger to the last drop in the cup. I don't think you have anything more to fear on that score, however. Bill will keep Hank in order for the rest of his stay before they go back to school."

Another Worry.
"It's something else that worries me," I said, and told her of Junior's request to keep him away from Hank, saying that he'd apologize if I stood right by him, but that he was afraid he'd fly at Hank again if Hank said anything "smarmy."
"I wish I could feel more like a stern preceptor," she said. "But secretly, I'd like to see Junior go for Hank, who certainly has it coming to him. But there is something else you may have to reckon with."
"And that is?" I asked, as she paused.
"You know better than I," she said slowly. "How Junior always bottles everything up inside him until he cannot stand it any longer, and then explodes into a paroxysm of tears and sobs usually in your arms."
I nodded.
"If I'm not mistaken," Katherine went on, "Roderick, with Hank edging him on, is planning to twist Junior with that and egg him into

LET YOUR AUTHORIZED DEALER SERVICE YOUR CAR

Your Car Will Be Better Serviced and Lubricated By The Dealer Who Sells It

The man who sold you your car is more interested in repairing and servicing it properly for you than someone else whose sole interest is the bill. As a future trade-in and making satisfied new car owners, your dealer is personally interested in your car. Authorized dealers employ Factory Schooled Mechanics, who are equipped with special tools to enable them to do the job quicker and better for less.

Experts maintain that 85% of all repair work is due to improper lubrication. Your authorized dealer is instructed by the factory on exactly how and with what to lubricate your car.

Only Genuine Parts Are Used By An Authorized Dealer When He Repairs Your Motor Car

And remember this—What you get for your car as a trade-in depends chiefly upon the care it has had. If the dealer who sold it has had the care of it, you may be sure its condition will bring top price.

FINES HIMSELF

Police Judge Says He's Guilty, Forks Over $1 Penalty.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (INS)—Addressing himself, Acting Police Judge R. P. Maloney, Jr., said "Your honor, I am guilty of violating a traffic ordinance and hereby fine myself $1."

Judge Maloney, who was ticketed by a traffic officer, didn't plead with himself for leniency—he just had the officer answer the usual prosecution questions, then paid off.

Maloney was acting in the absence of the regular judge.

TRAGEDY REVEALED

OAKLAND, Cal. (CP)—Mute evidence of a forest tragedy of probably 30 years ago came to light near here with the discovery of the heads of two six-point black-tailed deer. The animals had interlocked horns in deadly combat, and being unable to disentangle them, had starved to death together.

theory that the crime was a "local job." His reasons:

1. Levine was not prominent outside the community;
2. The placement of the ransom notes indicated a detailed knowledge of the community;
3. The condition of the body and the wire indicated it had been submerged with a heavy weight; the hideout from which it was carried must have been near New Rochelle.

'BOSS' HAGUE OF JERSEY CITY

Here's Picture Story of the Man Assailed as 'American Dictator'

1—FRANK HAGUE, Democratic big-wig (he's a vice chairman of the national committee) is mayor of Jersey City. He's also a "friend of the poor," his cohorts say, and "a little Hitler," according to his foes. He usually wears a poker face, but gets expressive (see above) assailing "reds." Last fall he announced his opposition to a CIO ordinance drive in Jersey City. Storm center at present is an eight-year-old ordinance prohibiting open-air meetings without a permit. Sixty-two, six feet tall, Hague doesn't drink or smoke, won't touch coffee or tea.

2—PLAYING TRUANT was a favorite activity of young Hague, who likes to refer to his rise from "bad boy to mayor." He was born in Jersey City's poorest district Jan. 17, 1876, one of eight children. Recently he proclaimed: "I am the law."

3—AS SERGEANT-AT-ARMS in the state assembly, Hague gained his first practical insight into politics. Then he became city hall custodian at $2,000 a year. He was elected city commissioner and director of public safety, 1913; mayor in 1917.

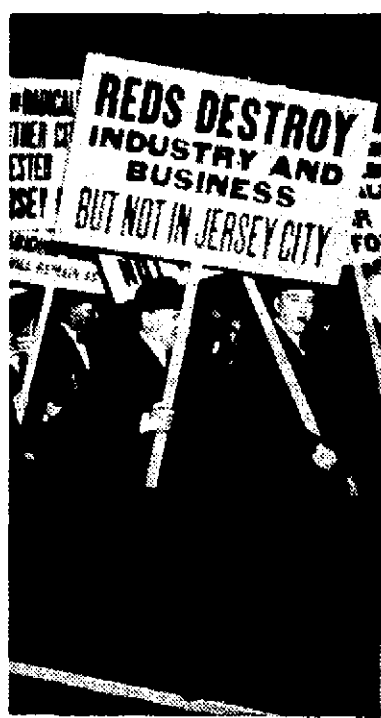

4—FOR FRIEND AL, with whom he posed in 1932, he organized the Smith forces in the east in the campaign of 1928 and was his floor manager at the 1932 convention which nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt. Afterward Hague threw his support to Roosevelt.

5—A SPORTS FAN, Hague goes to Florida to golf, seldom misses a big prize fight or baseball game. His foes often ask how he is able, on an $8,000-a-year salary, to maintain a winter apartment in Jersey City and a luxurious summer home in fashionable Deal, N. J.

6—HIT IN THE FACE, this man is being led away from Journal Square by Jersey City police. He had gone there to hear two U. S. representatives speak against Hague's methods—even though denied a permit. Advised there might be bloodshed, they stayed away.

7—ANTI-COMMUNIST BANNERS like these get a prominent place at pro-Hague meetings and parades. Opponents charge that the mayor is trying to prevent free speech. He answers that he is trying to keep the "reds" from invading Jersey City.

PRICE THREE CENTS

JUNE BRINGS CENT DROP IN MILK PRICES

Producers, Distributors Cut Charges; Quarts to Be 11 Cents, Pints Six.

Mansfield milk consumers today were assured of a reduction in the price of milk and coffee cream, effective tomorrow, June 1, through an agreement reached between major retail distributors of the city and the producers.

It is probable that the reduction of one cent on bottled milk and coffee cream will be made by all distributors, although the Producers' Distributors' association will meet tonight to determine what action it will take.

Others Decide Tonight.

Otto C. Kline, manager of Racine Farms dairy and secretary of the Producers' Distributors, said today that the 20 members would meet at his home tonight to decide on their policy, but it was almost certain that they would all agree to the reduction, with a possibility that they might decide on an even lower figure.

Announcement of the reduction by organized producers and major distributors—Isaly, Levering, Axtell, Paige, and others—was made today by Dale M. Dohner, manager of the Milk Producers' association. Starting tomorrow morning quarts will be reduced from 12 to 11 cents, pints from 7 to 6 and coffee cream from 12 to 11 cents per half pint.

Distributors and producers will share the reduction about evenly, according to Martin L. Levering, operator of Levering Dairy company. Levering said that raw milk for which distributors now pay $2.75 per hundred pounds will be reduced to $2.45 tomorrow. Levering said that over-production and business conditions were responsible for the reduction.

Decide At Meeting.

Dohner said that the reduction had been decided upon at a meeting of the association over the (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

Four Dead in Plane, Auto Crashes, Fall

2 Ashlanders Die In Air Tragedy; Holiday Toll In Nation at 300.

Violent death rode through the nation over the Memorial day holiday, taking nearly 300 lives, including one Mansfield resident who died in a fall from the second story window of his home, and two prominent Ashland youths who succumbed in a plane crash in Michigan.

Richland county had only one serious traffic accident. It involved five cars on Lexington avenue near the city and caused injuries to a Cincinnati man who is in General hospital. The Ohio toll from accidents was 23.

Girl Killed In Willard.

In the lone fatal traffic crash in the Richland county area, Miss Le Vere McCoy, 21, of Lima, died in Willard Municipal hospital an hour after she was injured in a collision of two cars west of Willard.

William Ohle, 54, Cincinnati, injured in the mishap on route 42 south of the city Sunday afternoon, suffered rib fractures and concussion of the chest. His condition was described as "good" at General hospital. Ohle was hurt when five cars collided after one of them was driven off the road to permit the repairing of a flat tire.

In Mansfield, Ludwig Kumisarek, 60, of 185 Orange street, was found dead early Sunday on the sidewalk in the front yard of his home. Coroner Hugh Winbiger said the man had suffered a heart attack while standing at an upstairs window in his home and toppled to the pavement.

Rites for Kumisarek, a native of Poland, were held this morning at St. Peter's Catholic church, with Rev. R. C. Goebel officiating. Burial was in the Mansfield cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bernice Kumisarek, four sons, Chester, Walter and John, of Mansfield, and Joseph of Priest River, Idaho, and one daughter, (Continued on Page 3, Col. 2)

CHINESE RUSH NIPPON LINES

Million Troops Are Massed on Hankow Front in Drive to Break Jap Offensive.

(By United Press)

China massed a million men along the northern front today in an effort to break the Japanese drive on Hankow.

Risking destruction of the finest Chinese troops, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek personally directed counter-attacks along the Lungshai railroad and the Yellow river designed to wipe out the trapped Japanese column under Gen. Kenji Doihara and to turn back two other columns fighting their way to the rescue.

Fighting was intense in the Lan-feng and Kai-feng sectors along the railroad which the invaders are attempting to follow to Hankow. Outcome of the battle probably will go far toward determining the fate of the Chinese capital.

Far to the south, there were indications that the Japanese were planning an attack on Canton where four days of aerial bombardment have cost close to 2,000 Chinese dead and 5,000 wounded.

Examine Organs of Levine Boy in Search for Killer

Probers Push Inquiry on Three Fronts After Boy's Headless Body Washes to Shore Near N. Y. Town.

(By Associated Press)

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.—The investigation of the Peter Levine kidnap-murder moved forward today on three fronts—in the laboratory, outside and in the realm of deduction.

Medical experts pursued a painstaking microscopic examination of the boy's organs in the faint hope of finding some clue, such as poison traces, to the manner in which he was killed.

For miles around this suburban community, officers explored the countryside, searched the Long Island Sound shore line, and questioned scores of persons in a hunt for other leads—the possibility of finding missing parts of the body or other clues; tracing the thin wire which bound the body; determining how the body got into the sound.

Missing Since Feb. 24.

The Levine boy, 12-year-old son of a moderately well-to-do New York lawyer, disappeared Feb. 24. His body, lacking head, legs and arms, was washed ashore in the sound Sunday, many weeks after the ransom notes had been received.

In the field of deduction, a high investigating authority offered the (Continued on Page 18, Col. 1)

HOLDS STRONG DEFENSE BEST WAY TO PEACE

Col. Lahm in Memorial Day Address, Cites Need for 'Sufficient Force.'

By ROBERT E. ROGERS.

An "impregnable" national defense, second to none is the best possible safeguard against war and the only assurance of peace for the United States, Col. Frank Lahm, veteran army officer, declared yesterday at the climax of Mansfield's Memorial day exercises at Memorial stadium in Mansfield cemetery.

"We must have sufficient force to protect the riches with which we are so abundantly endowed," Col. Lahm asserted, "to be listened to in the council of nations, to uphold our rights in this competitive age when the have not are all too ready to take by force from those who have."

One of Mansfield's most distinguished sons, Col. Lahm is in charge of aviation at Governor's Island, N. Y., and returned to his home city yesterday for the Memorial day observance. His talk followed the traditional parade of war veterans and patriotic organizations to the cemetery.

2 G. A. R. Vets Head Parade.

Heading the parade and riding in a place of honor, were two of Mansfield's six surviving veterans of the Civil war. Escorted by a guard of honor, the two veterans were George H. Fisher, 94, commander of McLaughlin post of the G. A. R. and Christopher Frye, 98, the city's oldest G. A. R. vet.

William Hammett, 93, another veteran, who attended the annual memorial day dinner at the American Legion, followed.

Knife, Believed Used By Killer To Stab Child 28 Times, Found In Boy's Home; Body Found In Grave of Mud, Weeds Close To Scene of 'Rabbit Hunt.'

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Police Captain Patrick Hayes announced today that Lindberg Heist, 15, alias Lindberg Trent, had confessed the brutal rape-slaying of six-year-old Shirley Ann Woodburn.

(By United Press)

CINCINNATI—A knife which police believe may have been used to kill six-year-old Shirley Ann Woodburn, golden-haired victim of a sex maniac, was found today in the home of a youthful suspect.

The suspect, whose mother said he is 16 years old but who said he is only 14, told police conflicting stories during a severe questioning that lasted several hours. He was locked up at 3 a. m. and questioning was to be resumed later today.

Shirley Ann, also called "Susie," was lured to a wooded hillside near her home late Sunday. There, according to the picture reconstructed by police, the fiend struggled with her in an attempt to satisfy his sex-mad desire and finally stabbed her 28 times and crammed mud into her mouth.

Police doubted that the killer had originally assaulted the child, a kindergarten pupil, but Dr. Frank M. Coppock, Jr., the coroner, said a part of her body had been cut away, possibly because of an insane sex craving.

Sees Child's Arm.

The body was found Monday in a shallow grave in the thicket, covered with mud and vines. Charles Nerpel, a newspaper photographer, saw the child's arm protruding from the earth while a searching party of 100 officers, neighbors and Boy Scouts hunted for the missing girl.

Two other suspects—one 18 years old and one 57—were questioned but apparently had satisfied police that they had no connection with the crime.

The third suspect was taken into custody after Matthew O'Leary, a street car motorman, said he saw a youth cleaning mud from his clothing Sunday.

The boy was said by police to have admitted being in the woods where Shirley Ann's body was found, Sunday, but said that (Continued on Page 11, Col. 3)

Florida Merchant Contacts Kidnapers Who Stole Boy, 5, While Asleep at Home.

(By Associated Press)

PRINCETON, Fla.—James Bailey Cash, wealthy merchant, made contact today with kidnapers who stole his young son Saturday night and demanded $10,000 ransom.

Returning from an early morning drive which he carried out in accordance with the directions in a note, Cash jubilantly reported the contact and said he expected to be notified momentarily where to find the boy. He declined to say whether he paid the ransom.

"Everything is favorable," Cash said. "I expect to have the boy back by 12 o'clock. I wouldn't be surprised if he had been let out somewhere already. It's just a matter of waiting."

The money he presumably paid over was obtained from a Miami bank Sunday.

Blond, blue-eyed James Bailey Cash, Jr., five and a half years old, was stolen from his bed while his mother went next door to help her husband close his grocery for the night. The kidnaper slit a screen, unlatched a door and took the pajama-clad boy away.

A note, one of three in the case, threatened death to the lad, known in the neighborhood as "Skeegie," if the father called authorities, but Cash notified the federal bureau of investigation at Miami, 25 miles north of here, and J. Edgar Hoover at Washington assigned a squad (Continued on Page 11, Col. 5)

BOMBED AGAIN

Barcelona Suburbs Under Fire of Insurgents; 500 Killed.

BARCELONA—(INS)—Towns and villages surrounding Barcelona were subjected to a series of terrific insurgent air raids today and an incomplete check-up stated more than 500 persons were killed in one community alone.

Chief sufferer was the port of Granollers, only a few miles north of Barcelona. Huge sections of the city were devastated by gigantic air bombs and some hours after the raids were over 403 bodies had been recovered from the ruins.

At 1:30 p. m., some time after the Granollers raids, the insurgent planes flew over Barcelona. This city, already hard hit by insurgent raids which took hundreds of lives in the past, was spared on this occasion but a number of nearby towns and villages were struck.

3 A. M. Masonic Meeting Attracts Record Turn-out

About 275 Masons got up in the middle of the night, or didn't even go to bed Sunday night so they could attend the early morning meeting of Venus Lodge, Memorial day at the Masonic temple.

The meeting got under way at 3 a. m.—three o'clock in the morning—and according to officials at the temple, was one of the largest gatherings to attend a work meeting there.

The third degree was conferred on one candidate by a fellowcraft team of Cleveland policemen.

Following the session a ham and egg breakfast was served, and to feed the 275 the cooks used 60 dozen eggs, 125 pounds of ham, 50 dozen doughnuts and 24 gallons of coffee.

Among those who attended the early morning meeting were 30 from other cities. They came from Cleveland, Youngstown, Ashland, Lexington, Butler, Bellville and Shelby.

NLRB WINS TEST

Supreme Court Orders Lower Chamber to Vacate Ruling.

WASHINGTON—(UP)—The supreme court today directed the third circuit court of appeals to vacate its decree prohibiting the National Labor Relations Board from re-opening proceedings against the Republic Steel corporation.

The decree was challenged as invalid by the government, which insisted that under the labor relations act federal courts do not have jurisdiction over the board until it has filed with a circuit court a transcript of an individual case. The board had not filed the transcript in the Republic case.

Attorneys for Republic Steel, together with the circuit court judges who issued the decree, contended that to comply with constitutional guarantees of a fair hearing the act must be construed as giving the courts jurisdiction as soon as the company filed its petition to have the board order set aside.

Mansfielders' Experiments Show Eye Fatigue Relieved By Vitamin A Therapy

Carotene Seen as Boon to Night Driving as Result of Westinghouse Tests.

By VIRGIL A. STANFIELD

Relief of eye fatigue of industrial workers and improvement in their health and general efficiency through the application of vitamin A therapy was advanced today by Dr. R. C. Wise, Mansfield eye specialist, who has just completed a series of experiments with 20 employees of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

Although it has been known for sometime that eye efficiency is dependent to a large degree on the presence of vitamin A in the body, Dr. Wise's experiment is the first time that practical application has been made on a large scale in industry.

Working with Dr. O. H. Schettler of the medical department at Westinghouse, and Ralph F. Bisbee, chief inspector at the Mansfield plant, Dr. Wise conducted experiments with carotene-in-oil, which he explained, increased the efficiency of color-matching inspectors at the Westinghouse plant by more than 75 per cent.

The carotene product, which is derived from carrots, carries a high percentage of vitamin A and increases the "light threshold" when taken at regular intervals by workers.

The results of their experiments in Mansfield are outlined by Drs. Wise and Schettler in a signed article in the Ohio Medical Journal.

Commenting on the possibilities of their discovery, Dr. Wise said: "This finding should be of (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

Police today were investigating a series of week-end robberies that included the burglary of a residence and a business establishment in which merchandise and cash amounting to $100 was taken.

At the Miller cafe, First and Orange streets, police reported a rear window pried open early Sunday and a music box looted of $15 in nickels.

Police were called to 580 West Fourth street late Sunday when Mrs. H. Denis came home to find her house ransacked and $16 taken from a dresser in an upstairs bedroom. Police said entrance was gained by cutting a screen on the rear porch.

The theft of a pair of field glasses from his automobile while parked at the rear of his home Sunday night was reported by Harold Buch, 303 Purdy street.

An automobile owned by Thomas Forrest, 121 Highland avenue, was recovered by Cleveland police yesterday after Forrest had made a futile attempt to catch the thief who took the machine from Park avenue west near the Ohio theater, Saturday night.

Forrest was across the street talking with a friend when he saw the man get into his car and drive away. He commandeered another car and gave chase, but lost sight of his machine when it turned north on Mulberry street and into heavy traffic.

VITAMIN A USED TO RELIEVE EYES

Westinghouse Tests Indicate Carotene May Be Boon to Night Driving.

(Continued From Page 1) special benefit to workers who are subjected to strong light and may prove of much value to movie stars who work under intense light for hours at a time.

He pointed out that tests have shown that automobile drivers who have followed the carotene treatment for two or three months have shown marked improvement in their night driving.

"The vitamin A product rebuilds the 'visual purple' in the driver's eyes, causing the eyes to be more sensitive to light and tending to eliminate temporary blindness resulting from bright headlights," Dr. Wise said.

He explained that the visual purple is a substance in the retina of the eye which determines the eye's sensitivity when subjected to light.

In industry, the findings are expected to be of marked value in helping inspectors to distinguish between colors and to work for longer periods without eyestrain and the resulting headaches.

The specific problem that led to his study was a relatively high percentage of rejections of off-color parts in the assembly of electric ranges at Westinghouse. The company has applied every known device to build up efficiency in this department in the last 15 years. Men assigned to this type of work were selected with the greatest care, shifts were shortened and changed more frequently. Even photoelectric color matching was tried.

An interesting by-product of the tests, which Dr. Wise expects to repeat elsewhere, was an appreciable improvement in health, particularly in those cases where fatigue headaches and eye-strain formerly were chronic. A number of employees taking the treatment reported that whereas they previously had dreaded night driving, they now no longer found it taxing. Others reported gains in weight.

"In some cases," Dr. Wise added, "persons who previously had been unable to read for more than 15 minutes without suffering eye fatigue have increased their reading periods to two and three hours by the use of carotene capsules for a three-month period."

The Westinghouse experiments were conducted with the aid of a new machine known as the biophotometer, which measures the rate and regeneration of visual purple by means of obtaining "light thresholds" under standard conditions. Doses of carotene, concentrated vitamin A, showed marked improvement in the renewing of the "visual purple" supply.

A Farmer's Diary

By Calvin A. Byers

I PASSED by a thrifty looking corn field on my way to town. In early May I watched the three-horse team pull the heavy fourteen-inch bottom plow up and down across the field, steady, slow, but with a constant forward movement.

I envied my farmer friend that day, working in his field in the warm sunshine, and the fresh May breeze. How damp the loamy soil, mellowed by the ice needles of last winter, clung to his shoe soles. How close a contact this farmer had with fundamental things. There is life and hope and faith in every narrow furrow turned. There is a dream of a fruitful autumn in every land completed.

The vision of thick standing golden corn concealed beneath the husk. And pumpkins dotting the field, shine orange and yellow in the slanting rays of the sun.

And this he dreams as he follows his heavy team, for this man is by himself. His thoughts can be his own. He can build his plans about his work, and then work the plans. He makes his jobs from day to day, and the very tasks made him a living, thinking being, an individual.

Two weeks ago I saw this field fine and even as a floor, and the farmer sitting on the two-row corn planter at the lower corner of the field, the team stamping impatiently as he made a few adjustments of the planter. Bags of fertilizer stood at short intervals along the end.

Today as I drove by, and looked against the rising sun, I saw what looked to be a perfect stand of corn, green, even and the only plants in contrast with the fertile dark brown of the soil. No matter which angle you looked upon the open ground, the hills of growing corn made straight lines of green across the field.

A farmer can be an artist at his work.

DEATH CLAIMS SECOND NURSE

Miss Margaret Curtin, 70, Was Life-long Friend of Late Miss Hayden.

Miss Margaret Curtin, 70, one of Mansfield's oldest nurses, died early this morning, only a few days after the death of her life-long friend and fellow-worker, Miss Helen Hayden.

Miss Hayden died last Thursday. Friends said they thought Miss Curtin's grief for her old friend may have hastened her passing. She had been ill for several months.

Miss Curtin died at the Curtin home, 336 East Fourth street, the house in which she was born and had spent her entire life. She was born Nov. 4, 1867, the daughter of John and Margaret Phalen Curtin. Her father was one of the first employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad company in Mansfield.

Like Miss Hayden, Miss Curtin early in life decided to take up the profession of nursing in order to serve humanity. She was graduated from St. Vincent's Charity hospital in 1904 and returned to Mansfield to practice. She was known for her charitable work and the fact that her interest in families and individuals continued long after her services as a nurse were no longer needed.

A member of St. Peter's church, she was the last of her immediate family, her parents and five brothers and sisters having preceded her in death. With her in the weeks of her illness was a niece, Mrs. Edward Holzbach of Ludington, Mich.

Miss Curtin was a member of the Joan of Arc circle, Daughters of Isabella.

The body will remain at the home until the hour of the funeral. Services will be held at 9:30 a. m. Friday at St. Peter's Catholic church, with Rev. R. C. Goebel officiating. Burial will be in the Mansfield Catholic cemetery.

BORAH ASSAILS 'HITLER-LIKE' PAY LAW POWER

Senator Says Five-Man Board Could Excuse Some Firms From Compliance.

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON—Casting precedent aside, Senator Borah (R-Idaho) criticized both house and senate wage-hour bills so vigorously today that attempts to reach a compromise may be retarded.

Borah, member of a joint committee seeking an agreement on the legislation, declared the senate bill would give "Hitler-like" powers to a five-member board which could excuse some firms from compliance with pay and hour regulations.

He made it plain he would not support that provision, despite custom which holds that conferees must back the measure approved by their chamber.

Nor will he agree, Borah said, to accept a bill without wage differentials. The house measure carries no such differentials.

Call at White House.

The Idaho senator expressed his views shortly before congressional leaders went to the White House for their weekly conference with President Roosevelt on the legislative program.

Their only question of pre-adjournment procedure was whether they should try to revive any part of the president's government reorganization program. If that is not done, they hope to end the session by June 11.

Borah, however, said he did not believe a wage-hour agreement could be reached by that date.

His appeal against too speedy consideration of the legislation followed an expression of caution by Chairman Thomas (D-Utah) of the senate conferees against accepting "any old bill." He added, however, that he thought a satisfactory measure could be worked out quickly.

Taking an opposite view from Borah, Thomas bid for unified labor support of the "jurisdictional" board empowered by the senate bill to grant exceptions and exemptions to pay and hour regulations.

Commenting that labor, "often betrayed and after the polls, is wondering and uncertain," he said he believed it could trust the administration and congress to set up a fair board.

The controversy over wage-hour legislation far overshadowed senate consideration of the only other remaining major issue—relief.

Administration supporters were beset by various proposals to "earmark" much of the $3,000,000,000 authorized by the relief and public works bill, but they laid the basis for a counter-attack.

Senator Schwelienbach (D-Wash.) said he would seek to eliminate from the bill restrictions on WPA expenditures so that relief funds could be poured out immediately in industrial centers where aid demands are increasing.

If he is unsuccessful in that action, Schwelienbach said he would try to increase WPA funds by $175,000,000. The bill now provides $1,450,000,000 for the WPA.

Senators Adams (D-Colo.), floor manager for the bill, said he expected it to be passed by the senate Thursday.

JUNE TO BRING MILK PRICE CUT

Producer-Distributor Group to Drop Cost One Cent on Quarts and Pints.

(Continued From Page 1) week-end. "It is unfortunate that producers should have to take less for their product at this time when there has been an increase in the cost of producing milk," Donner said, "but with a heavy producing season and with unemployment at a low point, producers agreed to a reduction at this time."

He added that rich pastures and heavy feed supplies had brought up production and that at the present time production is 100 per cent more than Jan. 1, of this year.

Last week a group of independent milk producers launched a fight for an increase in the price of milk, claiming that recently enacted city legislation regulating the production of milk, made an increase necessary. Members of the association said today, however, that the group seeking a raise was not associated with the producers who decided to decrease the price.

At present, only 29 distributors are permitted to sell milk in the city. Eight of these—including the major companies which reduced prices—sell pasteurized milk. The others sell Grade A raw milk, according to city health department standards.

YOUTH GETS 1 TO 20 YEARS ON FORGERY COUNT

Henry Morgenstirn, 26, of R. D. 2, Lexington, drew a one to 20 year term in the Ohio penitentiary this morning when he pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with forgery.

Morgenstirn had previously served a term in the Mansfield reformatory for the same offense. Seven other persons, who were indicted last week by the county grand jury, were arraigned at the same time before Judge C. H. Huston in common pleas court, three pleading guilty and four entering pleas of innocence.

On her guilty plea to an indictment for forgery, Miss Patricia Numamaker, 19, of Butler, Pa., was placed on probation for two years to the pastor of her church in Butler.

Miss Numamaker, who was arrested here several weeks ago by police, admitted attempting to forge four checks in the city for a total of $80.

Disposition of the cases of Robert Bushey, 19, of Shelby, and John Thomas, 25, of Mansfield, was delayed by Judge C. H. Huston to permit further investigation. Both pleaded guilty, Bushey to forgery charges and Thomas to an indictment for burglarizing an Orange street restaurant.

No trial dates had been set today for the four defendants who pleaded innocent. They are Donald Arnold, indicted for criminal assault; Myer Abramson, assault and battery; Howard Mosier, non-support of his wife, and John Reilly, issuing checks with insufficient funds.

David R. Buell, 41, Mansfield mail carrier, who is under indictment for the alleged embezzlement of $417 in Commercial C. Bowling league funds, will be arraigned at 9 a. m. Thursday.

Buell, former secretary-treasurer of the league was arrested Saturday on a secret indictment returned by the grand jury.

Police Hold Youth in Attack Attempt on Girl, 9.

A 21-year-old colored youth was held by police for investigation today in connection with an attempted attack on a nine-year-old colored girl at a Wayne street church Sunday night.

The suspect, identified by the girl as the man who took her into the church basement and promised ice cream and candy, was arrested at his home on East Second street.

Police said the child's mother told them the girl had gone to church with her two brothers, aged 13 and 9. She said the child told her that the man met her at the door after her brothers had gone inside and lured her to the basement, promising her ice cream and candy. They said she broke away and sought out her brothers, who related the story to their parents.
